Tanning

Tancream added to AestheticSource portfolio

UK distributor

AestheticSource has launched the Tancream sun protection lotion to its product portfolio.

According to the company, the product aims to combine instant bronzing and gradual self-tan with the protection of SPF50 and five-star UVA.

Co-director of AestheticSource,

Lorna Bowes said, "We are delighted to add Tancream to the AestheticSource portfolio of technologically-advanced, clinically-proven products – especially in the contemporary aesthetic industry, where clients are finding their patients are much more sun aware and keen to prevent skin pigmentation, sun damage and ageing by wearing SPF all year round."

Aesthetic nurse prescriber Anna Baker added, "I have been impressed with Tancream – it looks very natural when applied and it's without streaks. Not to mention the high SPF coverage with factor 50 and antioxidant protection – it's much more than self-tan."

Suncare

Vitamin C products launched by Obagi Medical

Skincare company Obagi Medical has released two new vitamin C products to sit alongside its Professional-C range of serums.

The products include Professional-C Peptide Complex and Professional-C Suncare SPF 30. The first aims to reduce the appearance of ageing skin while promoting a healthy-looking, youthful glow. It contains kinetin and zeatin, which are synthetic forms of plant growth factors that aim to assist in improving firmness and tone, as well as reducing fine lines and wrinkles. The Professional-C Suncare SPF 30 has been designed to defend against UVA and UVB rays. It is formulated with 10% L-ascorbic acid to help address the appearance of ageing skin and defend against the free radicals associated with sun damage. Steve Joyce, marketing and technology director at Healthxchange Pharmacy, the exclusive UK distributor of Obagi Medical products, said, "Obagi's Professional-C Serum has been extremely successful for our customers. Vitamin C is an important antioxidant, which can be highly effective at improving the appearance of ageing skin. Expanding this range therefore provides our clients with the latest developments in skincare science; using a peptide complex and the proven power of vitamin C in sun protection."
